Heidi was awakened next morning by a shrill whistle. As she opened her eyes, a beam of sunlight came through the hole in the wall, making the hay shine like gold. At first, she could not think where she was, then she heard her grandfather's deep voice outside and remembered joyfully that she had come to live in the mountains. She had been glad to leave old Ursula, who was very deaf and felt the cold so much that she sat all day by the kitchen fire or the living room stove. Heidi had to stay indoors where the old woman could see her, though she often longed to run outside and play. Now, she jumped out of bed, full of excitement at all the new experiences awaiting her. She dressed herself as quickly as possible, then climbed down the ladder and hurried outside. Peter was waiting there with his herd and her grandfather was just bringing Daisy and Dusky. She went to say good morning to them all.

Write true or false.

Raj walked quickly down the lonely mountain road. He had gone to play with his friends on the other side of the hills. Seeing dark clouds in the sky, he was now rushing back home.

At first big drops fell all around Raj. Soon however, the rain came down in a rush. The wind blew into his face, lightening flashed across the sky and thunder rumbled across the mountains. He ran to the first house that he could find. It was a broken down hut but there was at least a roof above his head. As he stood shivering in his wet clothes, he heard a faint sound coming from the corner of the hut. In the dim light, he found a small puppy huddled in the corner, Raj picked up the puppy and held it close to himself.

For an hour, the storm raged around them. Slowly the rain became drizzle and the ray of the sunlight broke through the clouds. Raj stepped out outside holding the puppy in his arms. Seeing the sunlight the puppy wriggled in his arms. Raj put it down and both of them headed home.

Answer the following questions.

1. Where had Raj gone?

Ans _____

2. When did Raj come out of the hut?

Ans _____

3. Where did Raj take shelter?

Once there was an owl who wanted to share his wisdom with everyone. He started a school for all the creatures of the forests. After teaching them for a few days, he decided to check how well they could think. So he asked them all, "Why does the moon shine in the sky?"

To this, the nightingale answered, "It shines so it may give me company as I sing all night." The hare said "It shines to throw light on my enemies so I may run away from them and be safe." The fox said, "I may see the squirrels and make a meal of them." The dog said, "It shines so I can guard my master's house well" On hearing all of them, the owl exclaimed, "Enough! There is only one moon in the sky! Why does each think it shines for you?"
